102-YEAR-OLD WOMEN'S AIRFORCE SERVICE PILOT RECOGNIZED WITH LIVING LEGEND AWARD

16 January 2024

ASUWANEE, Ga. (Atlanta News First) - A member of the WWII Women's Airforce Service Pilots (WASP) is being recognized for her bravery.

Jerrie Phillips Badger is a woman who has always had her heart set on the skies. She has loved to fly. She has loved the challenge. Badger is 102 years old now, but during her younger years, she was one of 1,074 women who would wear WASP wings.

On Monday, Badger was honored at her assisted living home in Suwanee with the Living Legend Award...

....“Don't let us be lost. Women are so often taken for granted, assuming that they are the underdog and they are not,” said Badger.
